1 St. John Fisher College
St. John Fisher College was founded as a Catholic College for men in 1948 by the Basilian Fathers. The College was named for St. John Fisher, an English Catholic bishop and theologian, and a Chancellor of the University of Cambridge. He was executed in 1535 by order of Henry VIII during the English Reformation for refusing to accept the king as Supreme Head of the Church of England. He is honored as a martyr and saint by the Catholic Church. The College became independent of the Catholic Church in 1968, and coeducational in 1971. Today, the campus is comprised of 27 buildings on approximately 164 acres. The College offers undergraduate majors in the humanities, social sciences, natural sciences, business, education, and nursing, several pre-professional programs, and a variety of master's and doctoral programs.

2 Wynd’s Woods Open Space
Hiram Wood (1867-1920) was a lawyer and an early officer of the Rochester Bar Association. In 1920, he was a delegate to the Democratic National Convention from New York, and ran unsuccessfully for U.S. Representative for the 38th District of New York. He was also the owner of Arlington Farms, widely known for its herd of imported Jersey cows. The year after his death, his remaining herd of roughly 50 head was sold at a dispersal sale. Hiram's daughter, Alice Wood Wynd, was a reporter and editor for the Democrat and Chronicle and the Times-Union, and was a founding trustee of WXXI. She was active in several civic groups, including the League of Women Voters, and served on the New York State Board of Social Welfare during and after the Depression. Alice conveyed the lands of Wynds Woods Open Space to the Town of Pittsford in 1974.
